Women Unlimited, New Delhi, 2005. Hardcover. Book Condition: New. An extraordinary first-hand account of Operation Recovery, carried out by the newly constituted governments of India and Pakistan in 1947, to recover women and children who had been abducted during the riots and chaos of Partition and restore them to their families. Kamla Patel, right hand woman of Mridula Sarabjhai who oversaw Operation Recovery, conveys the pathos and urgency of those turbulent times in her candid, no-holds-barred memoir of the three years that she spent in Pakistan and the camps she ran for rescued women in Lahore, Amritsar and Jalandhar; of how women were exchanged like oranges and apples; of the heartbreaking stories she heard and the lives she saved. Compassionate in its humanitarianism, this book is also of rare archival value, restoring women to a central place in the history of India's partition.
