Congressional Budget Office, 2009 OCLC Number: (OCoLC)314174845 Subject: Health care reform -- United States. Excerpt: . . . For providers and hospitals that are not part of integrated systems, however, the financial benefits of health IT are not as easy to capture. Correspondingly, those physicians and facilities have adopted electronic health records at a much slower rate. Office-based physicians in particular may see no benefit if they purchase and install such a product - and may even suffer financial harm. Even though the use of health IT could reduce costs for the health system as a whole so as to offset the start-up and operating costs involved, many physicians might not be able to reduce their own office expenses or increase their own revenue sufficiently to pay for it. The health benefits deriving from health IT are probably lower in unintegrated settings, but whether that tendency reflects the lack of financial incentives for effective use of health IT in such settings or stems from other limitations of a more fragmented system of care is not clear. All in all, despite the potential gains from health IT, relatively few providers have adopted it - about 12 percent of physicians and 11 percent of hospitals as of 2006. Effects of Recent Legislation Regarding Health IT The recently enacted American Recovery and Reinvestment Act establishes payment incentives in the Medicare and Medicaid programs to encourage providers to adopt health IT. Although the direct effect of those provisions involves participation in those programs, providers would use the newly purchased IT systems for all of their patients. Thus, both public and private health care delivery will benefit from the increased use of...
